THE GARDEN

The old-fashioned garden, whose chief charm lies in its beautiful flowers and shrubbery, is usually laid out more with the owner's love for certain plants and colors than with any idea of a dressed or formal garden, and usually without much regard to its environments, but it is,nevertheless, susceptible of treatment which adds interest and charm.

Both England and France realized the grace and beauty of Italian gardens, and used or copied wherever possible the ideas of the greatest garden lovers and beautifiers the world has ever known. England notably in such well-known examples as Wilton House, West Morland, Chatsworth, Clifton Hall, Belton, and Trentham; France, in its beautiful gardens at Versailles, St. Cloud, Chantilly, and Fontainebleau.

The formal or so-called English style of garden is less peculiarly adapted to the United States on account of climatic conditions, it being impossible to get the growth of shrubbery that is necessary to gain their formal and stately appearance.

Americans, however, with their ever readiness to take the best, are imitating the master garden architect, the Italian.

The ERKINS STUDIOS, recognizing the consequent demand for Italian garden objects, have and are copying directly by replicas where possible or in idea where not, the garden pieces as found in Italy and the famous museums on the Continent.

MATERIAL

The ERKINS STUDIOS execute their models in Pompeian stone, stone and marble.

Pompeian stone is a composition that is made to resemble the real stone. The base of the composition is cement. The colors mostly used are the grey, which resembles the greyfield stone, and the cream or Indiana limestone color, but almost any shade can be matched from a pure white to a vivid red.

The stone may be relied upon to withstand the American climate however severe. During the twelve years that the Company has manufactured this stone, it has executed work for many of the leading architects and builders. The many hundreds of customers who have purchased Pompeian stone for their estates prove that the designs and product of the Erkins Studios supply a long felt want in the decoration of the Garden, Hall and Conservatory. We are pleased to quote on special designs. We make designs and suggestions without charge.
